In a speech during the signing of the Credit Information System Law in Malabang, the President said lawmakers should not engage in "grandstanding" and instead focus on legislation that would combat the impact of the global financial recovery.

DOE: Expect more oil price rollbacks

By Abigail L. Ho

FOLLOWING THE MOST SUBSTANTIAL DIESEL price rollback yet, consumers can expect another early Christmas gift as prices of cooking gas are expected to drop significantly by mid- or end-November.

The industry is the institutional contract price of liquefied petroleum gas for November has been set at P100—by the equivalent of more than P100—that LPG suppliers have a lot of leeway to set prices, explained Zenaida Miranda, director of the Department of Energy's oil industry management bureau.

"The drop in the contract price was huge, so we're expecting a rollback. We'll probably feel that by the middle or the end of the month," Miranda said in a telephone interview yesterday.

This was confirmed by Petron public affairs manager Virginia Buciver who said the oil refiner would be slashing LPG prices in November.

But she did not say when the rollback would be effected and by how much prices would be cut.

1 key state decides White House race

WASHINGTON—BARACK Obama's prospects for defeating John McCain and becoming the 44th American president may be apparent shortly after the first polls close Thursday in the eastern United States.

An Obama victory in just one of four key states that voted Republican in 2004—Ohio, Florida, Virginia or North Carolina—would leave McCain with almost insurmountable hurdles to winning the race.

The US presidency is decided not by a nationwide popular vote, but by a state-by-state tally of electoral votes, which are allocated to each state roughly according to population. The winner needs at least 270 electoral votes.

With the election only four days away, Obama is likely to take all the states won by fellow Democrat John Kerry, when he lost to George W. Bush in 2004. In addition, he is heavily favored in two states won by

GMA signs credit info system bill into law

Data on credit-worthiness of borrowers will soon be readily available to banks

By J. Hernandez

SOON, DATA ON THE CREDIT-WORTHINESS of borrowers will be readily available to banks, easing the processing of credit to small and medium enterprises even as the country looks for targeted economic development.

President Macapagal-Arroyo personally signed into law the Credit Information System Law (CISL), which will compile credit data and set up a central registry of credit information.

Republic Act 9563 or the Credit Information System Law establishes the Credit Information System (CIS), which will compile credit data and set up a central registry of credit information.

"Congress has given our people an early Christmas gift through this Credit Information System Law," the President said during the signing of the law in Malacanan.

A creditable and comprehensive information system run by the CIS would ease credit processing times, and therefore, lower transaction costs, she said.

Expanded reach

"It will reduce the risk of default with better credit information. It will reduce the credit premium charged by lenders and increase lending volumes. It will help expand the reach of credit to small and medium enterprises," she said.

The administration bill, approved by Congress last month, was aimed at addressing a major problem of the Philippine credit market: lack of comprehensive credit-related information.

"This law opens the door to more propitious times ahead. There is more credit demand among lenders using leverage of the credit crisis. But with this, I think, it will open up the credit more a little bit more," Sen. Edgardo Sison, one of the principal authors, told reporters.

Since the credit information will be available online, small and medium-scale borrowers will now have "a reader and order account" in credit, the senator said.

"The lender will know, with the click of a mouse, the credit history of every borrower," he said.

The principle behind the law was to "put up a credit information database that would link state financial transactions," Secretary General Francisco, International Management Staff, said in a press message.

Banks need to be "selective" and hold back credit amid the global financial crisis. With the establishment of the credit information database, this could change, officials said.

"In view of the current financial crisis, the measure is very relevant. If there is credit information, there would be more security and banks would loan the financial standing of an institution," Francisco said.

Under the law, the CIS, to be chaired by the chairperson of the Securities and Exchange Commission, will receive and consolidate bank credit data, and serve as a central registry of credit information.

This registry, in turn, would provide access to reliable standardized information on the credit history and financial condition of borrowers.

Those that will have access to these data are the financial institutions, entities engaged in the business of credit reports, entities that handle loan processing, and businesses.

PRESIDENT Macapagal-Arroyo signs the Credit Information System Law (CISL) into law, surrounded by officials, including Vice President Noreen Santiago (right).

RP spots on top of 'Wonders' list

PHILIPPINE WONDERS ARE CALLED ON TO choose only one Philippine list at the online search for the New 7 Wonders of Nature as local tourist agencies dominate top five nominees.

As of Oct. 26 midnight, the Pensions/Pensions at Oldworld World in Palawan was No. 1, Chocolate Hills in Bohol was No. 2, and Tubbataha Reef in Palawan was No. 3.

The other candidates in the top seven are the Long Bay of Visayas, 2nd, Cebu's Banaue Beach in Benguet, 3rd, Alifan Caves of South Ambo, 4th, and the Cebu River shared by India and Benguet, 5th.

Though not in the running for the top seven spots, Mount Mayon at No. 11 is better than the equally iconic Mount Everest—shared by China and Nepal—at No. 13 and Mount Everest at No. 15.

Also, the importance of tourism, which has made the search as a big opportunity to push up the volume of visitor arrivals, urged more Filipinos to vote their votes and visit the three natural beauties to help them to choose which one is champion.

"The response of people and support from our fellow Filipinos are very evident in this last vote, and our own experts in natural tourism resources of country's 'Seven Wonders,'" said Tourism Secretary Ar Danas.

"Having these nominees from the country gives us a strong hope to be included in the national qualification round, an next step," Danas said.

Edgardo Sison Jr., Tourism Undersecretary in charge of planning and promotion explained that only one nominee from each country will be allowed to proceed to the next stage.

"Since doing so, the organization, countries with more than one nominee will be asked to select one nominee to represent the country in the final round of the competition," Sison said.

"Through choosing between these different yet equally unique wonders may be a difficult task, Filipinos should enjoy the exciting time and making their choice," he added.

information she is a very private person. After signing the Credit Information System Law in Malacañang yesterday, the President engaged heads of banks and financial institutions in a lengthy session before she was pulled aside by officials for some preliminaries.

While walking out of the Oval Hall, the President was asked by some reporters to confirm the wedding of her only daughter and announced child. She merely smiled and walked on.

I don't know

Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita said he learned about the report on TV and was surprised to believe it. He, however, could not confirm it.

"I can't confirm it because I have not spoken with the President. I'm not in a position to confirm or deny to believe that," Ermita said in an interview.

Later, when he was pressed to reveal more by reporters, he said, "I don't know really. I also read about it. I don't have any idea."

Secretary Jorge Sison, Presidential Management Staff chief, also said, "I don't know anything about it."

Private person

Quoting sources, ABS-CBN News reported online that Luli, the second of the President's three children, is set to be tied with Prince Felipe on Jan. 9, 2009 in the Belvedere.

Luli, 17, neither confirmed nor denied the report. "I never talk about my personal life. My personal life has never been open to media and that doesn't change," she told ABS-CBN in an e-mail.

Son Juan Miguel Lacierda, one of the advisors of the Credit Information System Law who decided up to the signing of the law, said he congratulated the presidential daughter via text message.

"She never said back," he said in an interview. "She never confirmed or denied," Luli is a prominent social driver and dedicated environmentalist.

She is perhaps the most tech-savvy among the three Arroyo children and worked as director of operations for the congressional organization Presidential Information Technology, Education and Development (PIT-ED). She fully expects to increase IT awareness and contribute to the effort to prepare Philippine society for the information age.

In 2006, she joined the foreign service examinations but decided not to pursue a diplomatic career because her mother would not sign her appointment papers for fear of being accused of nepotism.

Luli studied high school in Assumption and college at the Ateneo de Manila. She worked for a year with Ayala Land and then took up law courses in Foreign Service at Georgetown University.

According to ABS-CBN, Lacerda is the son of lawyer Antonio Lacerda and a nephew of the former Law School dean emeritus and constitutional law expert and business columnist Pt. Joseph Lacerda.

According to his profile on LinkedIn.com, Lacerda is former director of Ayala Petroleum Inc., former senior managing director at Bole Stevens Inc.'s Ltd. and former managing director at Baskin-Tyler Co.

12 armed men raid St. Scholastica

Men in SWAT uniform seize guards' guns, communication equipment

By Jeannette L. Andale

TWELVE MEN WEARING SPECIAL WEAPONS and Tactics (SWAT) uniforms raided before dawn yesterday a college in Makati, Manila and grabbed guns and communication equipment from trained security guards.

The men, clad in camouflage pants and armed with high-powered guns, entered at around 1:35 a.m. the St. Scholastica College campus at the corner of P. O'Connell and East Glades Streets.

Reports by the Manila Police District Mobile Patrol Unit (MPD-MPU) revealed that the raiders were about two kilometers away from the school. A black Toyota Tercel (2007-2008) and another vehicle that was not identified.

Stela Casales, security officer in charge, told police investigators they were surprised by the arrival of the "SWAT men" who quickly disarmed the guards on duty.

Casales said the men took two rifles, 10 semi-automatic, two shotguns and a handheld radio, then left through Gate 4 on East Glades Street, headed to the direction of South Superhighway.

A ranking official of the MPD who requested anonymity told reporters that the group simply intended to take the firearms.

"The group could be sticking up on firearms for a brief time," the official said. He said they could have targeted the school because they had anticipated this situation from the security guards.

Students of the MPD are conducting follow-up operations and have alerted other police units to investigate the Tercel bus.

The Tercel tried to get the side of the school as the bus had with made in St. Scholastica College were unharmed, except for a recorded voice message saying all law enforcers were busy. A television viewing screen, however, said the school would make a statement after an investigation.

SPD Criminal Investigation and Detection Unit (CID) head

Chief Insp. Benito Rodriguez said because the bus was at the front and midway section of the street it was not allowed to enter the school instantly because of an ongoing security of the building.

Armed and in uniform, Rodriguez said that the bus was among those who were present at the time of the raid.

POLICE are reported to be still only Friday morning after raiding the school. The school authorities have been alerted to be on high alert and to be ready to respond to any situation.

Vatican tightens screening guidelines for priests

Pope said to be considering freeze on Pius sainthood

VATICAN CITY—THE VATICAN has issued new psychological screening guidelines for seminarians on Thursday—the latest effort by the Roman Catholic Church to be more restrictive about its priesthood candidates following a series of sex abuse scandals.

The Church said it issued the guidelines to help Church leaders weed out candidates with "unacceptable" dispositions.

The guidelines have rocked the Church in recent years, triggering lawsuits that have cost hundreds of millions of dollars in lawsuits.

The guidelines "became even more so great because of the sex abuse scandal," says Jean-Louis Brugnot, head of the Vatican's research, however, that psychological testing was used in some seminaries as far back as the 1960s—or at least a decade before the actual abuse scandals erupted in public.

To all too many times, psychological data, sometimes of a psychological kind, reveal themselves only after ordination," says the guidelines.

The guidelines also prohibit "discrimination" in the screening process, but also state that "discrimination" can be used as a defense.

The Vatican Network of Those Abused by Priests said the Vatican needs to go beyond the Vatican's own guidelines when the group said the Church's "virtually unchanged nature of secrecy and unbridled power in the hierarchy" has left dangerous people in power.

"They have had all the steps have been applied," the Vatican Network said. "But

Dallas goes really big for All-star weekend

DALLAS—THE NBA ALL-STAR WEEKEND in downtown the new Dallas Cowboys stadium in 2008 and plenty of good seats are available—more than 100,000.

Living up to the old adage about doing things bigger in Texas, the Dallas Mavericks and NBA Cowboys are collaborating on hosting two women's basketball events. It will be among the first major events at the new stadium, expected to be fully operational in September.

And, if all goes according to plan, the event will be the second for the largest crowd ever to watch an NBA game, drawing the mark of 44,775 set at the 1989 All-Star Game, an exceptionally held at another "breakout" venue, the Houston Astrodome.

"It's totally outrageous," NBA commissioner David Stern said.

The 2009 All-Star weekend is being held at a collaboration between women and men. The event will be held at the Dallas Convention Center, with the Mavericks' arena hosting the men's game on the Friday and the Sunday football, which include the 5-point and dark seasons.

The Cowboys game will be on the Sunday with men's game eight or midday of the first half.

"We've got complete flexibility with the organization," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "But what we want is a lot of money on, to where it's done kind of event."

Mavericks president Donelson Utter said it took them five months to approve the proposal.

"I just wanted to make sure my guys didn't think it was a risk, and I didn't think it was a risk," Stern said.

The game will be on Feb. 14, 2009. The event's game will be in Texas.

Posey helps Hornets eclipse Suns

LOS ANGELES—RECENT KNOCKING James Posey knocked down three crucial three-pointers in the final quarter to lift the New Orleans Hornets past the Phoenix Suns, 90-89, in NBA action on Thursday.

The veteran wingman was acquired as a free agent in the offseason from the NBA champion Boston Celtics to provide the Hornets with more defense and shooting ability.

Posey finished scoring a game-high 21 points, while Chris Paul and Reggie Miller added 20 apiece to give the Hornets a 30-point win in the season.

"Going into the New Orleans game is a great opportunity with what this team does in the past year," Posey said in a postgame interview. "It's a great opportunity to win again."

Steve Nash passed the team with 24 points and nine assists, while Amar'e Stoudemire had 21 and 12 rebounds for Phoenix, which fell to 1-1.

Trailing late in the game, the Hornets pulled to within 83-80 with seven minutes left in the game before Posey hit the shot of his long-range jumper.

Posey added another three-point shot two minutes later to push the Hornets lead to 82-80. The Hornets made 23 three-pointers in an impressive display of perimeter shooting.

"He showed a lot of light tonight," Posey said. "He used to drive an identity and play at a tempo, and it's changing now."

In Dallas, Yao Ming and Yao Ming passed Phoenix from first to second in the New Year's Day game, 111-102, spicing the debut of new Dallas coach Rick Carlisle.

Cuban coach sees Olympic boxing medal

By Danilo W. Dima, Inquirer Staff

GUANAJAMA, DOMINIC—DEBATED over the money's value is not a medal as an international youth boxing meet here. Cuban head coach Angelito Roldan says he is willing to give up a third of the Philippine take to win a medal in the 2012 London Olympics.

"I am very sad but I am not missing any of boxes," said the 41-year-old coach in Spanish at the tournament's official hotel. Roldan also light flyweight champion Roldan and hometown hero Roldan were eliminated in the First International Boxing Association (AIBA) Youth World Championships.

"Boxing is not the best of the world but they lack experience," Roldan added. "Give your boxes into national as you can and they will see go empty-handed in London."

Roldan said he would negotiate himself if the boxes landed out in the next Olympics.

JOHAR KAMU, MALAYSIA—PHILIPPINE DEFENDING CHAMPION Antonio Murakami endured a frustrating even par 72 Friday and fell three strokes off the pace set by Australian Mitchell Brown halfway through the Asian Tour's Iskandar Golf Open.

Murakami, the Filipino open professional tour of 1.17 after a 72, said in the tournament he used to easily break through the Year (Singapore) tour last year, stood at 1.19, meaning he's off Thursday.

Japanese Chikara was the winner in the 2007, in the professional standings with a 2-under and after 28 holes. Also off the pace on the course was Iván Paganosa who missed an even par putt through 32 holes.

Ivan Laverie lay at 143, seventh of 108, but had lost by 7.5 Friday.

Bergie Inagaki stood at the pro-

28 Open winner David Gonsky of South Africa shot a 69 for 141.

Overnight leader Craig Smith, who shot a splendid 65, Thursday struggled early Friday and shot 3 over after nine holes.

Murakami had earlier against a bogey as he remained at five-under at Royal Island.

"I don't believe the two par three (on the second and 13th holes) which are better holes," said the islander. "I think I hit it better than yesterday but I couldn't make any putt."

The playing pressure there. I'm actually putting myself to try and win this tournament again."

In securing vital loans, stick to ODA, gov't urged

By Michelle K. Rana

ECONOMIC PLANNING SECRETARY RAFAEL BERNAL said the government would do well to tap more official development assistance from China and other bilateral lenders that provide concessional loans, citing rising interest rates brought about by the global financial turmoil.

China, with its estimated trillion-dollar in reserves, offers relatively cheaper loans, making it a good source of ODA, Bernal said.

ODA usually carry an annual interest rate of only 1 to 3 percent compared with commercial loans, which cost more than 6 percent.

"We have to improve our relations with China, which is the biggest lender to the United States. If [the Philippines] accept more concessional loans from China, why not do it?" Bernal said, when asked about his policy stance on foreign government with China.

The economic planning chief said that, although some China-backed projects in the past were tainted with corruption issues, Bernal should not stop the Philippines from seeking loans from the Chinese government. The most controversial of these related projects was the $220 million railroad broadband project. It was supposed to be funded by a loan from the Chinese government and implemented by Chinese firm ZTE Corp. The project was canceled amid allegations of corruption.

Bernal urged that government agencies

BSP used $10B to prop up peso, pay debt

By Doris C. Domingo

THE BANGKO SENTRAL NG PILIPINAS' FOREIGN EXCHANGE stock outside of its official foreign reserves had dwindled by $10.7 billion in September following severe global shocks that occurred from

Based on the central bank's latest report, foreign exchange held against foreign currency swaps and not yet booked as part of the country's gross international reserves (GIR) had been reduced further to $2.69 billion at mid-September, the lowest so far this year, from $3.56 billion the previous month.

The BSP has been selling US dollar bonds to temper the peso's sharp depreciation since March this year. It has been increasing its foreign exchange market while reserving its ODA. As a result, the foreign exchange swaps have since decreased from an all-time high of about $1.3 billion recorded in January of this year.

According to the latest report, the central bank has so far sold about $1.8 billion from the foreign currency swaps this year other than Bank US dollar from the spot foreign exchange market or service income of its subsidiaries. Currency traders said that in recent months, the central bank would provide liquidity to the foreign exchange market whenever the peso sharply depreciated during some day trade.

Over the last two years, the BSP would use foreign exchange swaps as a tool to prop up some foreign exchange purchased from the Philippine Trading System. These swaps rules to US dollars bought by the BSP from the open foreign exchange market and swapped the peso to dollars off some foreign exchange in the 15-month system that would otherwise push up inflation by increasing currency spending.

On the month of September alone, about $112 million worth of foreign portfolio investments in bond stocks, bonds and bank products flowed out of the country—the worst such outflow since mid-2007.

It was in mid-September when BNP Paribas was one of the first to sell its US dollar-denominated assets to the US Treasury. The bank's US dollar-denominated assets were sold to the US Treasury. Bankers ratify measures to shield RP from global crisis

MEMBERS OF THE BANKERS ASSOCIATION of the Philippines yesterday ratified their "unprecedented, self-imposed" measures to shield the country's financial system from the global crisis.

"We have adopted these resolutions all aimed to further increase liquidity, the use of the economic engine, and keep the economy strong amid economic challenges and position it for the recovery of the global economy,"

BAP president Austin Montemayor said yesterday.

Montemayor, who is also president of Bank of the Philippine Islands, said these measures were needed to further "ring-fence the economy and keep it functioning until it is time to re-open it." BAP executive director Lucinda Corrales added the measures would take effect immediately until Jan. 31 this year. The banking community on Thursday agreed.

• Filipino BAP members to reduce more dollar loans to the system by holding only half the amount of foreign exchange or "overcollateral" position they are allowed to keep. Currently at $30 million, or 10 percent of outstanding capital, this has been lowered.

• Require member banks to limit dollar sales more for normal domestic banking outside of dollar sales needed for foreign direct investment into the country.

• Encourage banks to hold more assets using themselves through an overlook. Trading facility limited by government securities. It states that every bank has some in funds.

"These measures are needed, although Philippine economic fundamentals are sound and our banking system is well-capitalized and functioning normally," Montemayor said. He has to prepare because we know that the financial crisis that started in the United States has spread to Europe and is now reaching Asia and the Philippines." Bank of Cebu

MOST TEENS HARDLY TAKE THE time to read a book, let alone actually write one. But Lisa and Andrew Duncan, who are 14 and 15 years old respectively, co-wrote and self-published a book—a travel guide, to be precise.

Education from Dares and Avelino, both students at the Bangkok French British International School, moved to Bangkok as soldiers. The children of expatriate parents (a Filipino mother and a French father), they will make sure they visit the Philippines frequently. The girls were currently in Manila in order to promote their book, "Bangkok Girls: Five and by Six."

"The book is actually the culmination of several years of thinking. Whenever we had friends come over to Bangkok, they would always ask us where tops and where to go," said Issa. "That's when we decided to make a book that lists our own favorite

The look is definitely for the young—brightly colored blouses, all rock n' roll, and subversive captions even for the shortest attention spans. (Since everything is translated in Thai, no young (or not so young) women can easily make their way around the shop just by showing rats drivers or pedestrians the name of the destination of their choice.

"There's something for everyone," is added. "We not just the usual manuals and reference you see in guidebooks. We mentioned activities you can do with your friends, like waterboarding and rafting. And we give warnings about some places and very honest opinions."

Andrew said, "Bangkok is full of surprises, and we want people to see what goes on beyond the usual tourist destinations. Sometimes, we'd be stuck in traffic because an elephant would walk by. Or sometimes, a family of five would ride by in a motorcycle. These are the things we want people to see in Bangkok, and we think that if you check out the places in our book, you'd be able to experience the city more."

other people's eyes. My father sometimes worries about me - that one day I'll go off to meet my college girl and never return home.

When I went to Singapore, I wrote up my column journal about Susan Apthorpe. My next piece would afford to have my say in her case when she faced trial.

A friend I met through an online community said it sounded familiar. Sheryl, who had turned down only two wedding routines, told me where she lived, and mentioned that it was very close to Great World City and a certain gay venue that my family passed everyday when leaving Miami Beach.

She gave me her cell phone number, and later that afternoon text-messaged her through to Aunt's phone (of course, with Mom's permission). We exchanged messages and agreed to meet at her and Jerry's store at East Ninth City. After finishing up, I went to our meeting place with Mom's car.

She came.
Sheryl looked every inch like me. We both had "chinky" eyes and short hair, though Sheryl's hair was shorter and blonder. (I went later the picture to prove it.) As soon as she sat down, we started talking, though we were both, for a few moments at least, tongue-tied. Or perhaps I was the nervous one.

End-spore

That encounter made my finger just like a light, eye-opening experience. What had made me happy? My parents had allowed me to meet someone whom none of us knew or had ever before found

Perhaps not all people online are good. For every good person there is an Llewellyn, there are two liars on the message boards. Many parents are becoming more guarded. I've heard of some people getting abducted when they try to meet up with those they've met online.

However, I follow my parents' guidelines. In exchange, my parents try to understand my life and my choices. When Mom asks me about what I'm doing, I am able to answer truthfully. But my parents let me know when I am right to give our personal information, and I listen. For best, but not ridiculously free like many others are. I like to live

Not quite. In the quest to help us get more out of our medicines, some vaccines have been formulated with a novel technology known as AS04 adjuvant system. It's been used in hepatitis vaccines to enhance the immune response of recipients, and lately, in the new vaccine against HPV, or Human Papilloma Virus, the virus that causes cervical cancer.¹

When an HPV vaccine has the AS04 adjuvant, immune response in patients starts higher and lasts longer. So where other vaccines may need booster shots, the HPV vaccine with AS04 adjuvant is designed to provide strong cervical cancer protection that lasts.^{2,4}

What's up in UP Mindanao?

WELCOMING to the premiere university

TAKING a break at the UP canteen

By Jane Barrios-Baga
UP Mindanao

WHILE EAST UP MINDANAO exists. There's no other way to start this article but to scream that we exist. If you've not been here, well, read on and feel what it's like to be in the premiere university down south.

Chow time

If you're the kind of person who can't relax down without eating something, then you'll find UP Mindanao a paradise. Food matters and much has changed all over the campus.

The canteen, managed by Ati Marbles and her crew, will serve you to satisfy your taste buds with its good food at rock-bottom prices. By the way, it's a good idea to eat there.

For those who love Marbles' refreshments, conveniently located beside the university store, often your favorite quickies from sandwiches to noodles, and tea to chocolate drinks, it also offers photocopying services.

If you like your coffee to come with granules and sweetener in full glass, Ling's snack bar is the place to go. It's also a good place to hang out if you like to be surrounded with music, since you will be treated to a variety of songs being played underneath big trees. Just listen to the lookers for hours.

Mobile vendors also roam the campus grounds, offering everything from snacks to ice cream and bottled water.

Campus fashions

Of course, most kinds of expression stretch to clothing as well. UP and Mindanao, being nothing new, have all diverse cultures, identities and fashion trends.

Going to school is no different from going to the beach here in UP Mindanao (except that we do not carry with us reliable floats). Wearing a swimsuit, however, is not really everyone's cup of tea, so wearing shorts and flip-flops.

Wear your shoes, because they indicate your fate. They're only made when it's hot.

Whatever the trend may be, flip-flops are a staple here in UP Mindanao, since they really match just about any outfit. Whether you're running late or walking alone, flip-flops will never fail to make you to your destination. Plus, they're really good for walking from one building to another.

Colorful graphics dominate on campus. They're everyone's favorite, being simple, fun and very comfortable to wear, especially in hot days. Some go as far as to wear them to work to show their love for the school.

Fun and more fun

Smiling is fun. Don't laugh. But if you don't like to study, you can hang by the administration building where to look up on it.

Chatting with your friends is just about everyone's idea. But not even that and laugh with some of your professors during vacant hours (they're good at recognizing the staff you desire to chat with). Picking on someone is fun, bullying is fun, sometimes. But everyone's different to look at someone's face.

When all else fails, resort to smoking. Smoking is fun.

Most don't want to be discussed here in UP Mindanao. We're not.

Do you want to tell us about your school?

Cervical cancer is the second-highest killer cancer of women in the Philippines.^{3,4} Every woman is at risk, regardless of age or lifestyle.^{5,6} Protect yourself through screening and vaccination. Screening detects the early signs of cancer,^{7,8} while an HPV vaccine with AS04 adjuvant can help protect against HPV 16 & 18, the virus types that account for 71% of cervical cancer cases worldwide.^{9,10}

Good for more than a round or two

Text and Photos By Min Galante

KARIN, MY FURNER-prime-by-default, and I play a little game of tag of our every other Wednesday night or so.

From my office in the north, I would prefer to Mikal to her place of work along Jupiter Street and pick her up. Our plans usually involve going home and having a quiet dinner. Two minutes later she was late, however, the plan normally changes.

Our dialogue goes like this:

Karin: "Paw. <Lower Name Here> is in Florida. We should stop by and say hello."

Me: "Oh, 'Paw, by' this kid, we are 'suggested by end and left' we were home at Mikal's 'Chasing Time' was being played.

Karin: "We won't stay that long. Let's just leave a round or two."

Me: "Oh, stop."

Of course we just don't have a round or two. With a drink-at-you can offer every Wednesday night, you're encouraged to drink at least three rounds. Okay maybe five. And perhaps an order of Razzmatazz.

But more than the drinks, the main attraction of Wednesday nights for me is the 4R and the music that's played throughout the evening. Karin normally feeds me when they start playing the Bar Star's "Time and Love" or Madonna's "Where's The Party?"

I got excited when the DJ starts playing some obscure song like Janet Carter's "Wild One" or a classic like Bruce Springsteen's "Dancing in the Streets." We inevitably end up dancing, covering songs that range from The Cyndi Lauper to The Rolling Stones.

Before going home, we always always down some of their pizza in an attempt to even out the alcohol and sober up. Flaminia also has other theme nights, and we've managed to check out the Fresh Fridays (covering R&B and Hip-hop music) and Latin Saturdays (with funky House music all night). The crowd is a pretty different breed, grouped but the energy is quite the same.

Last month, we got home relatively early with 14-year-old's "Love This One" playing in my head.

Flaminia's energetic theme nights guarantees extended happy hours

Tina Fey owes Sarah Palin a debt of gratitude

FEY (LEFT) has Palin representation but judges means the VP bet (right) more "accessible" to voters' voters.

By Hector U. Sison

THIS IS TINA FEY'S YEAR. —Tina who? She's the "Saturday Night Live" comic who's an exact copy of Republican VP bet Sarah Palin, whom she spoofs with great wit and gratitude.

—Gratitude, because Palin has boosted Fey's comedy career in a big way—and landed up "SNL" ratings, as well. The long-running spoof show currently plays in its biggest TV audience ever, which helps in its ongoing political satire, especially now that the US election is coming up fast.

Impressive successes

But, Palin isn't Fey's main moral index. Even before the campaign, she chalked up impressive successes in the movies as producer and screenwriter, starting with "Mean Girls" in 2004.

Early this year, Fey and former "SNL" classmate Amy Poehler starred in "Mean Girls," about a teenage girl (Fey) who gets a surrogate (Poehler) to give her the courage to stand up. Comedy Fey is working the script for a new film, "Mean Girls and Me" (Fey) about a teenage girl (Fey) who gets a surrogate (Poehler) to give her the courage to stand up.

On TV, Fey has struck gold with her popular sitcom, "Mean Girls," which she wrote and stars in. It's based on her "Mean Girls" script, and Fey has won a Golden Globe and a Screen Actors Guild award.

Fey's writing career has been doing so well that she was chosen by Time Magazine last year as one of its 100 Most Influential People. And she was included in People magazine's "50 Most Beautiful People" list more than once.

Should Fey have any more, a Golden Globe and a SAG award. But Fey has scores of Sarah Palin impersonations on "SNL" that viewers are currently eating up.

That success

It's become an especially big deal because Palin is a VP bet, and because Fey can make herself look and sound exactly like her. Fey admitted her Palin spot on the previous episode of the show's 14th season, and it quickly became NBC.com's most-watched video, with more than five million hits.

How did Fey do it? The VP bet's best-selling sold she was accused—controversially because she had never claimed up as Tina Fey for Halloween. Fey's comedic impersonation of Palin was such a big hit that its reruns were inevitable—last Sept. 27 and Oct. 4.

The Oct. 4 episode was especially that it gave "SNL" a 50-percent audience increase, prompting executive producer Lorne Michaels to publicly praise it. "I think the girls nailed it so far," he said.

Last Oct. 18, "SNL" topped the air once more when it got fully itself to appear together with her dead dog's head in a scene that gave viewers an especially glib comedy laugh.

And, last Oct. 23, Fey as Palin appeared with "John McCain" and "President George W. Bush" gave them a comical moment.

Ability

Fey's Palin impersonation has made her an even bigger star than ever; currently, it's also helped make Palin more "accessible" to voters' voters, since her ability to roll with the punches has done what "a good copy" did to.

What's up for Tina Fey? With her highly rated popularity, she can be expected to star in and write increasingly bigger TV film projects, and could end up in her genre's super-productions.

What's her advice to young people who also want to make it in the extremely competitive and demanding field of comedy?

Fey shares: "I've had the biggest impact on my writing, to I urge everyone to go into it, improvisation. Even if you're not really on your partner is a joke that you're both spontaneously creating together, improv is a source of material writing that works for me. It's not for everyone, but."
